

HKICPA seminar: 2017 Asia Economy: A Fragile Recovery?

Program code: SCPD17080801

China's economy expanded by 6.9% in the first quarter of 2017, confirming a soft landing for the world's second largest economy. A relatively stable political outlook in the Eurozone has provided a boost to global demand and spurred risk-on modes. Strong performance in the first quarter prompted international multilateral institutions such as the IMF and the World Bank to revise upwards their global projections for 2017. But how robust is this recovery going forward? Activity indicators in China point towards a moderation in growth, as the authorities continue to conduct a difficult balancing act between tightening monetary policy to curb asset bubbles and sustaining growth momentum via expansionist fiscal measures. Meanwhile, uncertainties surrounding Trump's fiscal policies and Brexit continue to haunt the global economy.

After joining this seminar, participants will have a better understanding on the economic trend and associated risks of Asia to establish credit control measures when trading with companies in Asia. The speaker will share his views on:

- How sustainable is the recent recovery?
- What are the risks and opportunities for Asia?
- Are there any implications for global trade activities?
- Highlights of Coface Annual Asia Pacific Corporate Payment Survey 2016
- Which sectors will be the most risky in the coming months?
- What is Coface's take on the subject as a global credit insurer?
