About the programme

Managing IT Risks and Digital Risks (SCPD18082001)

Course outline

Information Technology (IT) is now widely used in all industries – from government departments to financial institutions, and in all areas – from finance department to customer services over mobile apps. While many organizations are enjoying the benefits with the use of IT, many fail to clearly identify, fully understand and properly manage various IT risks. The impact of failure to manage IT risks ranges from lack of efficiency or unnecessary manual process to significant reputational and/or financial damage. More importantly, the tasks of managing IT risks should not be rested solely on the shoulder of the IT department. It is equally important for CEO, CFO, as well as auditing/compliance team to understand ways to manage IT risks.

Digital transformation or the implementation of disruptive technology could revolutionize ways of businesses' own operations as well as providing products and services to their clients. Similar to the implementation of traditional IT systems, using of digital transformation also presents challenges and risks to organizations. Success in managing the associated risks often is the key success factor of the use of digital technologies.

After joining this seminar, participants will gain knowledge about:

- What are the top 10 IT risks from the perspectives of IT, auditors as well as business
- How to manage risk and challenges associated with various digital transformation

Speaker

Mr. Michael Pang, Managing Director, Protiviti Hong Kong

Mr. Pang is Protiviti's practice leader of the Greater China Technology Consulting and Digital Transformation solution. He possesses 20 years of experience in advising top management on various strategic topics including cybersecurity, data privacy protection, IT strategy, IT organization transformation, security and privacy, IT risk management, post-merger integration and operation improvement. Before joining Protiviti, Mr. Pang took key consulting roles at Boston Consulting Group, A.T. Kearney and Kodak.
