Event code: EWEB21080501

Role of insolvency practitioners in upholding ethical governance and practices

About the topic

Professionals in the restructuring and insolvency field are actively involved in making and executing decisions on the disposal of assets and businesses for companies in distress. They may face a variety of pressures and ethical challenges, while trying to avoid conflicts and to maintain objectivity and impartiality. Therefore, having a strong sense of ethical governance and decision-making are important aspects of an insolvency practitioner's work.

At this webinar, the speaker, the deputy executive director of the Independent Commission Against Corruption (ICAC)'s Hong Kong Business Ethics Development Centre, drawing on the ICAC's experience of investigations and corruption prevention, will introduce relevant laws and regulations, analyse common corruption and ethical risks, and offer some practical advice to professionals on upholding professional ethics. Topics covered in the webinar will include:

- Current corruption scene and introduction of relevant sections of the Prevention of Bribery Ordinance and Code of Ethics for Professional Accountants – Professional Ethics in Liquidation and Insolvency in relation to the duties and responsibilities of professionals in preventing corruption and other malpractice
- Discussion of business ethics and ethical issues encountered by professionals
- Discussion of the "4As" Model on ethical governance – Awareness, Assessment, Action and Assistance offered by the ICAC
