

International tax planning – Using Hong Kong as a stepping stone

Programme Code: SCPD17111601

Due to the fifteen Action Plans developed by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development to tackle base erosion and profit shifting, and other initiatives, the international tax environment has become more complicated and is constantly evolving. To prepare for these impending changes, businesses operating internationally must take an active approach in managing their international tax affairs and be aware of the key tax developments and structuring considerations.

In this seminar, the speaker will use Hong Kong as an example to look into tax treaties, issues arising from investing overseas, key international tax rules, etc.
