Shareholder actions under s.238 of Cayman Companies Law

About the topic

An increasing number of Cayman Islands-incorporated companies are being de-listed from public stock exchanges through a “take-private” process, and may subsequently be re-listed elsewhere. However, the price paid to public shareholders by the company as consideration upon privatization may be subject to challenge. Under the Cayman Islands Companies Law, shareholders dissenting from the take-private process are entitled to seek payment of the “fair value” of their shares. The fair value is determined by the Cayman Islands Grand Court.

In this webinar, Ian Mann, a partner at Harneys and a regular speaker at Institute events, who has been involved in a number of the leading cases, will:

- introduce the statutory take-private process;
- explore the underlying legal principles, including “fair value” valuation methodologies; and
- discuss the relevant case law in the Grand Court, Court of Appeal and Privy Council.
