

E-learning: Accounting cum auditing essence: a fresh look at impairment of trade and other receivables

COURSE HIGHLIGHTS:

While the expected credit losses (ECL) model in HKFRS 9 Financial Instruments has been in application for several years, we continue to see recurring findings by the regulators on estimating and evaluating ECL. You might have attended a number of webinars to equip yourself with sound knowledge of the related accounting requirements, but somehow you might still be trapped by the common pitfalls and need clarification on how to deal with the application issues.

Let's have a fresh look at the impairment of trade and other receivables! In this webinar, the speakers will talk about this topic in an easy-to-follow, conversational manner with reference to several interesting illustrative examples to help you navigate the key accounting and auditing considerations in the impairment of trade and other receivables of non-financial corporates.

Don't miss this training opportunity before you get busy with closing out the financial year end.
